CHNA Key Findings	Ann introduced Berwood and reviewed the CHNA process, as well as identifying priorities. Berwood then presented the CHNA Key Findings from primary data collection and secondary sources. He explained the top 10 causes of death and disability as well as the top 10 risk factors as cited in “The State of US Health, 1990-2016. Burden of Diseases, Injuries, and Risk Factors Among US States.” Further, he described the benefits of utilizing the CDC Health Impact Pyramid. In his findings, Berwood shared that Franklin County isn’t a diverse community as far as race and ethnicity. While reviewing the Survey Indicators of Social Determinants, he noted that 1 in 3 Franklin county residents experienced 1 or more economic hardships. Franklin County has an older population; the median age increased from 40.2 to 41.9 from 2010-2017. In terms of educational attainment, Franklin County has had more people graduate from college than in past years, however the rate of secondary education attendance remains low compared to the state and nation. There are large income disparities by race and ethnicity in Franklin County; Black and Latino households have much lower median income levels than White households. In regard to housing, Berwood shared that 23% of home owners and 41% of all renters in Franklin County still spend 30% or more of income on housing. As well, about 11% of the participants in the telephone survey are depressed. The Robert Wood Johnson County Health Ranking trends portray that the county is lacking in regard to accessibility. Berwood summarized the overall data for the group; Franklin County residents confront significant social determinants barriers in their everyday lives. In conclusion, diet, exercise, obesity, and mental health issues affect large numbers of Franklin County residents.
Identify CHNA Priorities 2019-2022	The members were randomly split into groups and participated in a “1, 2, 4 All” Prioritization Process that Ann facilitated. Each member wrote down what they believed the most important community priorities are based off of Berwood’s findings. They then shared their thoughts with a partner and also as a small group. The members came together to review each group’s identified priorities and which ones were feasible.
